Sujet

Some people say that advertising is extremely successful at persuading us to buy things. Other people think that advertising is so common that we no longer pay attention to it. Discuss both these views and give your own opinion.

Proposition de corrigé

Since the early twentieth century, advertising has held tremendous sway over people's lives. Some people think that it persuades us to buy things, but others claim that it has lost its effectiveness. We will see that advertising is still as powerful as ever.

To begin with, people argue that advertising has lost its impact because it is so prevalent. It is hard to deny that most people nowadays are aware of advertising and that many of them make efforts to avoid it. When using websites or apps, we are bombarded by hundreds of ads and we generally ignore them, which obviously diminishes their power.

However, it should be clear that advertisers are conscious of this and constantly innovate in order to attract attention. Though people are more distrustful and critical, adverts still have a strong influence over what people buy because advertisers succeed in implanting subtle messages. Data harvesting by search engines and social media sites has also made advertising much more targeted, allowing companies to pitch products to specific demographics rather than attempting to show their product to the greatest number of people. This means that even people who avoid adverts are likely to be influenced after seeing one. Advertising is a science that is developing quickly and will continue to dictate our shopping habits for many more years.

All in all, people are generally more aware of advertising than they used to be and many try to avoid it, but that does not mean that it has lost its power. Advertisements still exert influence over our lives because they are more intelligently designed and more invasive than they used to be. (273 words)
